MEN GAVE UP AND DIED ON RAFT AS WOMAN FOUGHT ICE AND SEA

Mrs. Harris Feldman and Husband Clung to Improvised Craft and Fought Heroically Against Heavy Sea and Bitter Cold for Twelve Hours Until Picked Up by Vessel—Many Men and One Woman Fell Beside Them and Rolled Into the Sea.

DEATH LIST NEAR 200; TEN SURVIVORS OF CREW

Men and Women on Steamer Larchmont Fought Like Mad for Places in Few Lifeboats, and Survivors Tell Different Story from That of Captain—Rocky Shore Retards the Work of Finding Bodies.

(Special from Staff Correspondent.)

BLOCK ISLAND, R. I., Feb. 13.—Few women have had an experience such as that which befell the two women survivors of the Larchmont disaster. Mrs. Harris Feldman, of No. 232 East Ninety-ninth street, New York, and Miss Gallup. Mrs. Feldman was afloat on a piece of wreckage for twelve hours in a temperature that registered below zero. She saw thirteen men and one woman die and fall into the sea.

The names of 128 persons who were on board the steamer Larchmont when she sank are known. Of these nineteen are known to have survived.

Of the sixty-three bodies recovered so far only eleven have been identified. In addition to the known missing there were many others aboard, and the death list may reach 200. Eleven bodies were found late to-day by fishing schooners. Two of these were of women.

KENTUCKY LEAVES WITH SURVIVORS.

The Joy Line steamer Kentucky left Block Island this afternoon for Providence with the bodies of fifty-two of the Larchmont dead and the nineteen survivors. The running time, in the face of a heavy gale that prevails between Block Island and Providence, is about four hours.

The bodies will be taken to a morgue in Providence and the survivors will be hurried to hospitals. All are suffering from frost bites. Some will have to sacrifice hands or fingers, and two or three, it is feared, will have to lose their legs in order to stop the spread of blood poisoning.

It is not likely that many more bodies will be recovered at Block Island. Men experienced with the ways of the sea in that section say that many corpses have been swept out into the Atlantic. Some of these may be found later along the Massachusetts shore. A fleet of fishing schooners and tugs is patrolling the sea from Block Island for miles out searching for bodies.

Mrs. Feldman is in a bad way, but able to tell with some degree of clearness of her frightful experience. Her hands, feet and ears are frozen, but the surgeons say that she will recover eventually.

"My husband was once a sailor on the Black Sea," said Mrs. Feldman on Block Island to-day, "and it is to his coolness that I owe my life. When the crash of the collision aroused us we took time to partially dress before leaving our stateroom."

FOUGHT WAY TO DECK THROUGH MOB.

"We had to fight our way to the deck through a cursing, screaming mob of men and women. Some were hurled down the stairways and lay on the floor senseless. They went down to death with the ship."

"When we gained the icy deck we could not get to a boat. The men fought like lunatics for a chance to reach a lifeboat or a raft. We saw the boats drift away and realized that we were deserted. My husband kept his nerve and held me closely that I might not be pushed overboard by the crazy people who were running around, shouting and tearing at their hair."

"Then the boat went down. Luckily for us we happened to be standing on the after deck. As the ship sank the air pressure forced this deck loose and we were afloat on a good sized raft."

"There were sixteen of us on the frail shelter. One other woman besides myself was in the party. As soon as we were clear from the swirl caused by the sinking of the boat, great waves began to break over the raft. Within five minutes the other woman was swept overboard. She was benumbed by the cold and did not utter a sound as she disappeared."

SWUNG ARMS TO WARD OFF COLD.

"My husband told me that if we expected to keep alive in that freezing atmosphere we would have to keep the blood in circulation. He instructed me to move my arms and legs continually in order to keep the blood circulating in the extremities. The great waves breaking over us

REV. E. L. HUNT FAILS TO DEFEAT BASSETT DIVORCE

Brooklyn Minister Was Co-respondent and Husband Is Given Decree.

(Special to The Evening World.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—Charles Chester Bassett was to-day granted an absolute divorce from his wife, Fannie Rice Bassett, daughter of the late Senator Rice, of Arkansas.

Rev. E. Lawrence Hunt, pastor of the New York Street Presbyterian Church, of Brooklyn, N. Y., was named as co-respondent in the suit, which when tried recently caused a sensation. Rev. Mr. Hunt was specially represented by Counsel in the case, and made an independent fight to defeat Mr. Bassett in his action.

The pastor, in his defense, declared that he was a defendant in the case. Mr. Hunt is now in Ocala, Neb., where a counter suit by Mrs. Bassett against her husband was called to-day.

Bassett, who is a Government land agent, began his divorce action against his wife last summer, naming as co-respondent the Rev. E. Lawrence Hunt, now pastor of the Noble Street Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn. Mr. Hunt formerly occupied the pulpit of the Westminster Presbyterian Church at Washington, and during this period it is alleged, he formed the acquaintance of Mrs. Bassett.

In the suit for divorce Bassett asked for the custody of four of his five children. The father of the last child, the husband alleges, is the Rev. Hunt. The clergyman declared that he was simply a friend to Mrs. Bassett while she was at Johns Hopkins Hospital, where the youngest child was born.

Charles F. Hastings, of this city, swore on the stand at the trial that Mr. Hunt had said he would see Mrs. Bassett through her troubles "if it took me through hell." Mr. Hunt declared in a letter to a friend while the trial was pending that in the event of a divorce he would make Mrs. Bassett his wife. It was charged by the husband that the clergyman and Mrs. Hunt had visited Atlantic City, Philadelphia and this city together.

Bassett in his suit for divorce alleged that Rev. Mr. Hunt visited his wife at various times at (Bassett) residence in Washington, while he (Bassett) was absent from the city. Mrs. Bassett did not deny her interest in Mr. Hunt, but she was trying to get him a position as chaplain in Congress, using her influence as an ex-Senator's daughter to place him in an exalted position of honor.

All allegations of impropriety either in Washington, here or in Atlantic City she stoutly denied.

The crowds still linger in town, and enough of them came out to the course this afternoon to fill the grand stand to overflowing. The card to-day was one of the poorest of the season, but the crowds did not care and showed their money in on the old place as if they were Synonymy.

The weather was fine and the track fast. The news that the Amis bill had passed the lower house in Arkansas was much discussed. The general opinion was that the Oklahoma meeting at Hot Springs could not last longer than the present week, or as soon as the Governor signs the bill.
